First Contact HR provides organizations nationwide with employment background screening and human resource solutions. The services provided include identity verifications, criminal and credit records research, drug and alcohol testing, attitude and knowledge testing, driving records, identification badges, employment and education verifications, workforce training and human resource policy development.

The need for employers to be well-informed about prospective hires is becoming all too important - especially for small to medium-sized businesses. Conducting proper due diligence during the hiring process is the new standard. "Negligent Hiring" lawsuits are on the rise, precipitated by exaggerated resume and/or application credentials, and positions filled by less-than-trustworthy individuals. Regrettably, many businesses take the needless risk to experience the deceit first hand, or worse yet, a lawsuit, before they take action... before they confirm the facts.

Why First Contact HR?

- Fast and accurate background check results in 1 to 24 hours on average (Guaranteed)
- Reports are simple and easy to read, combining background screening, drug testing and assessment testing in one report
- Superior client service and telephone responsiveness
- No extra fees, monthly minimums or contracts
- National and International coverage - over 225 countries
- Consumer Reporting Agency and FCRA compliant

President's Message:
What a great month

December is!!!

It seems like not long ago it was summer and I was just beginning my term as GVFHRA's Chapter President, and now December and the end of the calendar year are upon us. Our chapter has been busy this fall, with events ranging from the dvHRp Summit with record-breaking attendance, meeting programs which included an update on legal hot topics by an attorney and one on creating a strategic wellness initiative within your organization to return dollars to the bottom-line, and a food drive to benefit our community. We have had chapter representation at both the PA State SHRM and the National SHRM Leadership Conferences.

And now it is time to relax a bit and do something different- our annual holiday networking event. This is a time to reconnect with old friends and associates, and to meet new colleagues and friends in a less formal setting than our other breakfast and dinner meetings. With “speed networking” you will have an opportunity to meet most of the event’s attendees; there is an opportunity to visit with members of our various committees to learn about what their focus is and perhaps find one that appeals to your HR passion, and become a volunteer (you know you’ve been thinking about becoming more active for awhile now); and you can also do some shopping at the Silent Auction.

December signals the end of a calendar year, and that a fresh new year is at hand. Your committees and board have been busy looking ahead and have a great 2008 planned! There are informational seminars planned by committees on best practices and HR basics to help you increase your HR competency, a slate of fantastic meeting speakers, and our annual college night where we support the future of our profession by awarding undergraduate and graduate scholarship to students from local area colleges enrolled in HR programs. In addition, we have a very special evening planned in May to celebrate our chapter’s 25th anniversary. As you can see, 2008 is going to be a very busy year, so I hope you will join us in Dec. at our networking event as a way of celebrating 2007 and looking forward to 2008.

In addition to signaling the close of the calendar year, December is a month rich with holiday tradition for many faiths and cultures, and provides an opportunity for HR professionals to steward our organizations with diversity management practices that are inclusive and honor the multi-cultural diversity of our staffs. Here are just a few tips to help guide you:

- If your organization holds a company celebratory event in December, label it a Holiday Party or Event, rather than a Christmas Party to ensure all employees feel welcome;
- Review company policies to make sure that provisions exist so employees may have available time off to observe holidays meaningful to them;

- Do some research and learn about holidays other than those you personally observe and consider sharing that knowledge with others.

The SHRM website has additional tips to help in this area.

In closing, it has been a busy and exciting fall, and I am looking forward to an even busier and productive New Year for the chapter. And for our members who may celebrate a special holiday during this month, I wish each of you a joyful and enriching holiday season enjoyed with family and good friends.

a time for personal reflection of my life and what I am grateful for.

*Lynne Kester, MS, SPHR
President, GVFHRA*

Legislative Update: It Could Happen To You

What would an $11.6 million jury verdict do to your organization?

If you are not sure, pick up the phone, dial up Madison Square Garden and ask to be connected to MSG’s Chairman, James Dolan. If Dolan won’t take your call, ask to be transferred to the New York Knicks front office and ask to speak to the team’s President of Basketball Operations and head coach, Isiah Thomas.

As most people by now are aware, a jury recently returned an $11.6 million dollar verdict (compensatory damages are still to come) against MSG, the Knicks and Dolan. Specifically, the jurors awarded former Knicks executive, Anucha Browne-Sanders, $6 million for sexual harassment, $2.6 million for retaliation and, for good measure, $3 million for individual liability imposed on Dolan.

Regardless of whether your organization has the resources or public image of MSG or the Knicks, the jury’s very clear messages apply to all organizations in equal measure.

First, no one is above the law. Not the CEO, not the superstar salesperson, not the hourly line worker, regardless of how “important to the organization” the employee considers himself or herself. If an employee conducts himself or herself in a manner inconsistent with the organization’s Equal Employment Opportunity Policy, that employee’s conduct must be addressed and the employee must be punished. Prompt, corrective, remedial action must be taken. Moreover, and equally important, the victim must be made to feel comfortable. The manner in which this is to be accomplished obviously will depend on the circumstances, but one step that absolutely is required is to ensure that the victim is not subjected to any unlawful retaliation, regardless of the form.

And that is the second lesson of the Browne-Sanders case: retaliatory conduct cannot be tolerated. When an employee brings an internal complaint of harassment, discrimination or retaliation, that employee must be protected from retribution at the hands of the wrongdoer. The wrongdoer must receive a gravely serious and straightforward message that retaliation of any kind will be met with severe disciplinary action, including termination of employment. In addition, the organization should engage in consistent follow-up with the complaining employee for several months following the complaint. This follow-up not only will serve as a helpful defense in the event a retaliation claim comes and the employee did not disclose the offending conduct, it also sends a message to all employees that retaliatory conduct will not be tolerated.

Take heed employers – protected complaints must be taken seriously and retaliation, in any form, simply cannot be condoned. Eleven point six million is a pretty big number.
